A single faced square stone dial incorporated into the fabric of this beautiful Edwin Lutyens designed building. Open gnomon complete. The house is dated 1901 but the dial was added afterwards.
Markings
Arabic numerals from 5am to 4pm with hour, quarter and half hours marked. "Lat 56o2m N Long 11m20s W". Correct for location. The 12 for noon is missing from the dial - why?
Remarks
The statement at the door saying that the sundial is incorrect with respect to longitude, is itself incorrect. The sundial shows logitude as time, not degrees and so is correct.

Probably 17th century; restored 1889; removed to current site 1982. 3-stage, red sandstone, obelisk type sundial with hollow-faceted dials much eroded.
Markings
Modern stepped 3 tier rectangular base giving way to shaft of 5 cubes with hollowed out symbols; 2nd stage capital with reclining, upright and proclining dials surmounted by incised tapering finial.
Remarks
Some mystery surrounds this sundial. Some believe that it was originally Leven's Market Cross which was subsequently lost and then found again in 1889. Others think that this is unlikely.

Badly eroded two faced cube sundial set in an ogee arched niche in the SW corner of this church where Jim Clark the racing driver is buried. Gnomons missing but would have come out of sun like motifs.

Markings
Although dated 1816, the sundial is thought to be early 18th Century. Neither the date nor the motto of "Hoc age dum Lumen adest" is now readable. Roman numerals. Hour lines not visible.

Remarks
Ross mentions this dial, but his sketch shows it on a skewputt. However this is definitely the same dial, so it has obviously been moved, probably early 20th century when the tower was added.

This is just a pedestal, but it looks as though it was originally for a sundial.
Markings	There is a plaque on top of the pedestal commemorating John Rennie a native of East Linton who went on to design London Bridge, Waterloo Bridge and the main Naval Dockyards amongst others.
Remarks	Situated by the roadside on the eastern outskirts of East Linton.

A semi cylindrical dial on the church buttress. There was a stone dial (gnomon) on the sloping under surface, but this is no longer in place. It is thought to be a very old dial perhaps before 1581.
Markings
Lines visible, but Roman numerals are very faint. A singular piece of stone sticks out from the west side and this may have been meant to cast a shadow on the gable of the church.
Remarks
Situated on the lovely old church in the centre of Cockburnspath. Ross remarks on this dial and the one at Oldhamstocks at great length. He knew of no others, but there is one on Fogo Church.

Late 17c dials on a 15c column on a traffic island at the east end of Peebles High Street. According to Ross, was removed to the Chambers Inst. so as not to obstruct the traffic on the High Street.

Markings
Arabic numerals outside the chapter ring. There is a mounted plaque giving some details of the history of the cross.

Remarks
Thankfully it is now back on the High Street in its rightful place. Restored 1895 and 1965. It has an iron vane on the top showing the date 1662 although the dial is considered to be 1699.

A simple horizontal octagonal dial on a nice bulbous pedestal with a square top situated in the centre of the walled garden. Filigree gnomon.
Markings	Roman numerals from 4am to 8pm outside the chapter ring. Central 8 point compass. Two word motto, no longer legible.
Remarks	The dial plate does not look like the original as it does not fit exactly into the space allocated, although it could be that it has been moved slightly. Mid 19thC.

Description Sited in a niche on the north side of the old bridge at Berwick, this is a rather plain dial refurbished in the 1990s. It is a small circular dial plate mounted on a large square stone top.
Markings Plaque giving details of restoration at the behest of Ruth Lister in 1995. Roman numerals. No lines with a sail-like gnomon.
Remarks The whole dial and pillar is integrated into the wall of the bridge. This does not appear to be the original dial face sketched by Ross, although the pillar is probably original.

A moss covered and very weathered ancient sculptured stone hardly recognisable as a sundial now. Only the stub of the remains of the gnomon gives it away. 2'6"High x 1'11"Wide x 1'3"Thick.
Markings	Some lines just visible. The top of the stone was converted into a sundial apparently bearing the date 1698 in incised figures, but no longer legible.
Remarks	A custom has built up to leave a coin on the top of the dial, which was covered in them when I visited - I wonder why?

Possibly dating from the latter part of the 17c, the pillar stands on a circular stone base which is flush with the ground. Stands adjacent to Houston House which is now a hotel.
Markings
No visible markings. It looks as though the original dial plate was actually circular and not square as described by Ross, unless he was talking about the whole thing and not just the dial plate.
Remarks
It appears that the "massive square dial" as described by Ross in 1890 has been replaced by an octagonal dial which now has its gnomon missing. Otherwise as described and illustrated by Ross.

Unusual column - a bearded man's head sitting on a square plinth with a detailed circular brass dial plate with 16 compass points and each hour with 30 divisions. Roman numerals read inside/outside.
Markings
Dial plate marked "Watkins Charing Cross London" with latitude of 55'30". Culzean is latitude 55'35" so it was made for here or nearby. Also a coat of arms inscribed "A Wise Fine LA"?
Remarks
Situated on the battlements overlooking the sea adjacent to the castle, but facing towards the gardens away from the sea. Maker's name makes it pos circa 1790.

Very eroded with no lines or numbers visible, but the gnomon surprisingly is still in place. Circular moulded shaft to square top and bottom, although reputed to be a fossilised tree stump.
Markings
Remarks	Located on the Castle Promenade above the sea shore. Believed to be 17th C and sited at the harbour prior to 1833.

At the time of my visit, this dial had been recently stolen leaving only the cylindrical column still in place.
Markings
Unclear and difficult to read.
Remarks
Located within the walled garden at Cambo Gardens between Crail and St Andrews.

Octagonal dial mounted offset on a square marble plate on a square column. Both metal and marble plates are numbered (in Roman numerals) which suggests that the metal dial plate is not original.
Markings	The hour lines and numbers on the brass and marble dials do not line up.
Remarks	Located in Branklyn National Trust for Scotland Gardens.

Octagonal metal dial on a stone octagonal dial with carved numbers and location. Is the dial plate original? I think perhaps not - the metal dial hour numbers do not line up with the original nos.
Markings	Latitude of 56'33" marked on stone dial. Spring, summer, autumn and winter on metal dial plate.
Remarks	Located in Branklyn National Trust for Scotland Gardens .

The column is mounted on a high stepped plinth and probably dates from the Victorian rebuilding of the castle.
Markings	Copper dial plate with Roman numerals from 1am to 12pm.
Remarks	Situated to the left of the main house at Blairquhan Estate near Maybole in Ayrshire and is one of three dials in this estate. Not previously recorded.

Cube with chamfered corners and a ball dial finial on a polygonal column. On a small square plinth Only parts of the gnomons still in place. Originally from (old) Kirkforthar House.
Markings
Arabic hour numbers clearly visible on ball dial.
Remarks
Balbirnie House is now a hotel and the dial is located in a red chipped area at the edge of the rear car park apparently uncared for. When asked, none of the staff knew that it was there.
